FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 28.

A WOMAN FRIGHTENED TO DEATH.—A case of literal frightening to death occurred in the town of Sodus, New York State, on Monday night, and has since been the topic of conversation in that locality. On Sunday a farm laborer, James Van Wycklin, while intoxicated at Sodus village, started to walk to his home on a farm several miles distant. At about midnight he reached the residence of Mrs. Ellen Ketchum, which he thought was his own. The woman was nervous and timid, about fifty years of age, and lived alone with her grandson. Van Wycklin, still intoxicated, demanded admission to the house, and then began to kick upon the doors and to smash in the windows, at the same time calling to be let in. Mrs. Ketchum thought her house was attacked by bandits, and was found by her grandson in a swoon in the middle of her room. When daylight appeared and Van Wycklin had recovered from his debauch and left the farm, the grand hastened for help. The woman remained unconscious for several hours and died from the effects of the fright.

Penn Johnson was driving through Taylor county, Fla., the other day, when a big rattlesnake came suddenly into the road just ahead of the horse. The horse tried to dodge around the snake and the snake tried to get away from the horse, and the result was that the rattler became tangled in a front wheel of the buggy. The horse, by this time thoroughly scared, ran, and the revolution of the wheel threw the snake into the buggy. Johnson thereupon quit the vehicle in a remarkably rapid manner, he doesn't know how, and the horse went on like the wind. By cutting across the country Johnson overtook the horse after a run of two miles. He looked carefully, but there was no snake in the buggy.
